

*Returning Home:
The Journey Continues*

Workbook

At its heart, the journey of each life is a pilgrimage through unforeseen and sacred places that enlarge and enrich the soul.

John O' Donohue

HOW TO USE THIS PRESENTATION

Over the past couple of years, suggestions have come from members for more focus on pilgrims returning from the Camino and the challenges they face in processing their profound experiences. At the 2017 and 2018 Gatherings, Cheryl Grasmoen made presentations on this subject. A number of chapter coordinators requested that it be available for use at a chapter event, possibly in conjunction with a Welcome Home event. Several chapters intend to offer a Shell Ceremony in the spring and a Welcome Home event in the fall, bookending the Camino experience.

The workbook is intended to be distributed to the attendees to take home and use as a personal processing tool. Cheryl suggests that the PowerPoint be presented BEFORE the workbook is handed out; otherwise people will start to look through the workbook and lose attention on the PowerPoint.

Here is the description of the presentation that you may wish to use:

The Journey Continues: Returning from the Camino. For many pilgrims, the most difficult part of the Camino de Santiago de Compostela is not the walk, rather the return to ordinary life. Drawing from the experiences of dozens of pilgrims, this session will identify the reasons why return can be so difficult and will suggest a framework for creating a personal plan for carrying forward the essence of your Camino.

You walked the Camino! That’s a lifetime accomplishment in anyone’s estimation. Months or perhaps years of preparation and many resources were invested in your experience. No matter what you experienced, it was unique and very personal.

Few of us think, “Been there. Done that.” Instead we return home with the desire to find a way forward that preserves the extraordinary experience of the Camino.

There are many ways to go forward. Each way is as individual to the pilgrim as was the Camino itself. Here’s one short exercise that may help you create your own way. I invite you to continue your journey. Buen Camino!

The next step of your journey may be to think back about your Camino with the objective of discernment. Reflect upon your unique Camino experience; check those things that you most wish were still present in your life. Then go to the indicated page, read the quotes for a bit of inspiration and some suggestions, then craft your plan:

On the feeling of improved physical condition:

To keep the body in good health is a duty... otherwise we shall not be able to keep our mind strong and clear.

- Buddha

I miss...	I will explore...
the feeling of improved physical condition	prioritizing and scheduling regular exercise in my daily routine
	joining a gym
	getting a trainer and physical assessment finding a group activity that interests me such as tennis, hiking, pickleball, swimming participating in local group events such as bike tours, cross country skiing, hiking changing my daily routine to take the stairs, walk more, park at the edge of the lots limiting my time on the internet and in front of the t.v.
	taking a walk after my main meal
	journaling my daily activity and nutrition using a pedometer and setting a daily goal assessing my diet and following Michael Pollan’s advice: “Eat food. Not too much. Mostly plants.”

On community and shared identity:

We have all known the long loneliness and we have learned that the only solution is love and that love comes with community.

- Dorothy Day

In the social jungle of human existence, there is no feeling of being alive without a sense of identity.

- Erik Erikson

I miss...	I will explore...
community – a shared group identity	joining or starting a local chapter of American Pilgrims finding a hiking or walking club becoming a regular participant in the APOC Facebook group becoming an hospitalero and joining that international community becoming active in like- minded communities not related to the Camino, such as advocacy groups and charitable giving circles joining a musical or theater group

On sense of accomplishment:

Man is always more than he can know of himself; consequently, his accomplishments, time and again, will come as a surprise to him.

- Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

I miss...	I will explore...
a sense of accomplishment	starting a regular practice of identifying a project, a task or a goal that's challenging for me and doing it finishing something that I once started taking a class in a subject of interest or need developing more structure in my day by regularly setting goals and objectives in writing and recording my progress developing expertise in something of interest, e.g., a Master Gardener or a docent at the art museum

On solitude:

In order to understand the world, one has to turn away from it on occasion.

- Albert Camus

Solitude itself is a way of waiting for the inaudible and the invisible to make itself felt.

- May Sarton

I miss...	I will explore...
the solitude and time with myself	signing up for a mindfulness course online or in my community scheduling a regular time for meditation taking regular walks by myself staking out a private place in my home for regular use for reading, writing, making art, meditating taking yoga or tai chi lessons learning about the practice of walking a labyrinth and finding one in my community learning about the benefits of the Japanese practice of "forest bathing" – shinrin-yoku

On immersion in nature:

It would be well, perhaps, if we were to spend more of our days and nights without any obstruction between us and the celestial bodies, if the poet did not speak so much from under a roof, or the saint dwell there so long. Birds do not sing in caves, nor do doves cherish their innocence in dovecotes.

- Henry David Thoreau

There is a pleasure in the pathless woods,
 There is a rapture on the lonely shore,
 There is society, where none intrudes,
 By the deep sea, and music in its roar:
 I love not man the less, but Nature more.

- George Gordon Byron

I miss...	I will explore...
immersion in nature	joining nature walks through Audubon, local park activities or researching and visiting local natural settings on my own taking a class at the local nature centers learning to kayak, canoe, cross country ski, bike, swim gardening at home or in a community garden learning about astronomy and star constellations volunteer opportunities in area parks restricting the amount of time spent on my electronics
	the benefits of the Japanese practice of “forest bathing” – shinrin-yoku

On learning new things:

I don't know who I am. And I don't think people ever will know who they are. We have to be humble enough to learn to live with this mysterious question. Who am I? So, I am a mystery to myself. I am someone who is in this pilgrimage from the moment that I was born to the day to come that I'm going to die. And this is something that I can't avoid, whether I like it or not, or — I'm going to die. So, what I have to do is to honor this pilgrimage through life. And so I am this pilgrim — if I can somehow answer your question — who's constantly amazed by this journey. Who is learning a new thing every single day. But who's not accumulating knowledge, because then it becomes a very heavy burden in your back. I am this person who is proud to be a pilgrim, and who's trying to honor his journey."

- Paulo Coelho

I miss...	I will explore...
learning new things	taking classes offered in my community going to a city nearby, researching its history and exploring it on foot selecting a topic of casual interest and diving into it making a list of five things that I thought about on the Camino that I wanted to know more about and researching them (e.g. history of the Templars) becoming familiar with my family history through genealogical research learning to play a musical instrument learning to be more proficient with technology

On sense of bravery and expanding personal boundaries:

Far better is it to dare mighty things, to win glorious triumphs, even though checkered by failure... than to rank with those poor spirits who neither enjoy nor suffer much, because they live in a gray twilight that knows not victory nor defeat.

- Theodore Roosevelt

I miss...	I will explore...
a sense of bravery and expanding personal boundaries	thinking of something that intimidates me (e.g. solo travel, public speaking, water sports, foreign language) and taking it on learning a new skill (e.g. sign language, simple mechanics, a musical instrument) identifying those things that I will regret someday not doing and picking one to accomplish now becoming involved in local government or community affairs

On sense of freedom:

You know it's alright. Living and lovin' every day and night
Thanking the Lord for the music in me
Peace of mind and feeling free

- Charlie Daniels

I miss...	I will explore...
a sense of freedom	reserving blocks of time to put on my Camino backpack, fill my water bottle, take a sack of Manchego, bread and fruit and walk where I've not gone before spending less time taking care of my possessions, answering emails, reading Facebook and saying "yes" too often finding the means to change a job that is unfulfilling and destructive of spirit ending relationships that drag me down attempting to restore a lost or neglected relationship

On spiritual growth:

There was a time when I had all the answers. My real growth began when I discovered that the questions to which I had the answers were not the important questions.

- Reinhold Niebuhr

I miss...	I will explore...
spiritual growth	becoming involved in a church, temple, synagogue or other group experience studying the works of spiritual writers (e.g. Fr. Rohr, Thich Nhat Hahn) finding a spiritual mentor beginning a practice in meditation or prayer setting a regular time for thinking and reflection

On the excitement of dreaming about and planning my Camino:

Without leaps of imagination, or dreaming, we lose the excitement of possibilities. Dreaming, after all, is a form of planning.

- Gloria Steinem

I miss...	I will explore...
the excitement of dreaming about and planning my Camino	starting to save for my next Camino or other major trip and begin a file of places I'd love to visit finding opportunities in the USA – Pacific Coastal Train, Appalachian Trail, Superior Hiking Trail and hundreds more organizing a small group to hike on a regular basis serving as a mentor for first time pilgrim answering questions of first time pilgrims on APOC Facebook

On connecting with a global community:

I live my life in widening circles
That reach out across the world.

- Rainer Maria Rilke

My life belongs to the world. I will do what I can.

- James Dickey

I miss...	I will explore...
connecting with a global community	tutoring immigrants and refugees in my community helping with refugee resettlement in my community hosting international guests to local university mentoring international college students learning a foreign language and joining a study group starting an ethnic cooking club with friends volunteering at a cultural center attending university presentations on international events staying connected with my international Camino friends via email or Facebook training to be an hospitalero and serving

On engagement in story telling – my own and those of others:

You're never going to kill storytelling, because it's built into the human plan. We come with it.

- Margaret Atwood

Storytelling is the essential human activity. The harder the situation, the more essential it is.

- Tim O'Brien

I miss...	I will explore...
engagement in story telling – my own and those of others	writing for La Concha volunteering to speak at the local library, high school, community education about the Camino or other unique experiences starting a Camino book club by finding at least one other pilgrim in my area and discussing a Camino book each session

On living a more simple life:

Life is not complex. We are complex. Life is simple, and the simple thing is the right thing.

- Oscar Wilde

Voluntary simplicity means going fewer places in one day rather than more, seeing less so I can see more, doing less so I can do more, acquiring less so I can have more.

- John Kabat-Zinn

I miss...	I will explore...
living a more simple life	sorting through and discarding clothes, electronics, books and magazines and household items that I don't use saying "no" to requests that aren't a priority or important to me making time every day for myself cutting back on time spent online or watching t.v.
	cancelling magazine subscriptions that just end up in piles unread donating most of my books to a library sale

On connecting with others beyond trivial:

Wise men speak because they have something to say; Fools because they have to say something.

- Plato

I miss...	I will explore...
connecting with others beyond the trivial	listening more than talking in conversations finding openings in conversations to go deeper opening up to others
	reinvesting in my existing relationships and getting to know them on a deeper level mentoring someone

On discernment:

If you want to identify me, ask me not where I live, or what I like to eat, or how I comb my hair, but ask me what I am living for, in detail, ask me what I think is keeping me from living fully for the thing I want to live for.

What can we gain by sailing to the moon if we are not able to cross the abyss that separates us from ourselves? This is the most important of all voyages of discovery, and without it, all the rest are not only useless, but disastrous.

- Thomas Merton

The question of what it means to lead a good life is always there - it's large and nagging in the background - but there's a lot of specificity in terms of how you approach it. You approach that question based on what you're doing now, what you've learned, what you've done that interests you, and what you've done that you will definitely not do again. I don't think that questioning what you're doing at any time should paralyze you. It can help you refine your path while staying open to possibility. I absolutely think of it as a companion to having your feet on the ground and walking forward.

- Krista Tippett

I miss...	I will explore...
moments of discernment and self-knowledge	starting a regular practice of meditation or prayer joining a retreat – guided or not entering therapy
	asking friends for suggestions of readings that raise and explore big questions journaling about what I learned about myself on the Camino experience and who I am now trying my hand at illustrated journaling

On being a Camino angel:

I was able on occasion to be a Camino angel to others. The needs of other pilgrims can be visible to us as we share the Camino walk with them, so it is for us pilgrims to be angels to one another as best we can, so that all of us may complete our Caminos with our needs fulfilled, and that sense of blessing and satisfaction that comes from accepting and offering help when needed.

- Anonymous Canadian pilgrim

I miss...	I will explore...
being a Camino angel	volunteering at local charities that help the needy reaching out to friends and acquaintances who seem to need support of some kind using my gifts to benefit others (e.g. musical, gardening, driving, tutoring) finding opportunities to commit random acts of kindness speaking up in defense of others who need a voice supporting other pilgrims as they prepare for the Camino or upon their return

CONCLUSION – WALKING FORWARD

The Camino may have given you something different than what you expected. Can you identify those small and great epiphanies on your Camino? Can you distill them into values and intentions that you can integrate into your life? If so, you have returned home with something far more meaningful than the Compostela that you carried home in your backpack. You have experienced the gift of pilgrimage.

Now the challenge is to incorporate those moments of discernment into your ordinary life. Perhaps these worksheets will provide a catalyst.

As you walked your own Camino, you will design your own journey forward. In the words of the poet David Whyte, “The greatest danger is that we will wake up some day and find we have not lived our own life, but someone else’s.” Seize this opportunity to walk forward on your own path.

Ultreya!

You may have other ideas for activities that further the Camino experience. Please share them. You may have a poem or quote that illumined your own Camino experience. Please send it. This resource is a work in progress and will be updated periodically. Send your additions to grasmoen@gmail.com. Thank you.

All seek a bridge from their old lives to something new Something that does not end at the last scallop shell
Something that shapes the heart long after the pilgrim reaches the end of the Camino
- Richard Ray
